The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS
The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it is, in fact, the popular Unabridged Dictionary re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation.

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

The Crisis of the Nation.

The fiery issue of Vesuvius' peak, Nor Pelee on the island of Martinique, Spread not such desolation in its path, Nor caused the woe the "liquor traffic" hath. Nor rocks of Scylla; nor Charybdis' waves, Have hurled such numbers headlong to their graves, Nor can the Maelstrom on the Norway coast As many victims as the traffic boast. The sword, the famine, and the pestilence, Marine and railway accidents, But search the records, and in them you'll find The "traffic's" list is more than all combined. If sets its snares e'en to the temple's gates, And day and night for man's destruction waits; The reins of government are in its hands, And kings and rulers bow at its commands, Asylums, and the gloomy prison cell, The potter's-field, the pauper-house as well, The scaffold, where death's penalty is paid, All adjuncts of the deadly liquor trade. "Look not upon the wine when it is red," For in it lurks the serpent's poison dread. "Inflaming wine, pernicious to mankind, Unnerves the limbs and dulls the noble mind."

From California.

Dear Editor Register—I am not going to say, "Come, take a sail 'round the moon'" but I am going to be more hospitable and ask you to come to Los Angeles and partake of some of the many good things which now invite you to this summer land. This is the time to see this section of California at her best. The winter rains are over and the occasional early morning fog only tends to soften the beauty of flower and plant for the advanced sunny day.

Of course every part of this glorious country of ours has its own peculiar charms, and a lover of Nature who has passed a springtime in Arcadia Valley will have a quickened heart-throb at a mental picture of her hills and dales of this season of the year, but Nature is, perhaps a little more generous in her gifts to Southern California in that we have a greater variety and the aid of so equable climate.

Come join us on a motor trip out upon the broad highways in the vicinity of Los Angeles. The city covers a space of forty-four square miles and affords the very best in the way of entertainment, hotels, etc., and with all of her beautiful parks and boulevards it is still a city, but to drive out beyond the City's busy streets—we see vast slopes covered with the emerald coat, great avenues with pepper trees on either side, their drooping boughs bejeweled with clusters of red berries; great orange orchards hanging with the golden fruit and at the same time bursting into fragrant blossom; and the palm and calla lily which must be guarded so carefully in pots "back east," furnish beautiful shade and hedges; roses climbing to nod in at the second story windows of many houses; gorgeous geraniums making scarlet hedges along the way. As we near the mountains which make a magnificent background for all this coloring, they seem to look down very gravely upon the little garden spot just described, but we dare to face them and marvel at their canyons, grades and the covering of dazzling white which the higher, bolder peaks wear.

We will also enjoy our return trip through Pasadena, the garden spot of the southwest, with her magnificent hotels and homes where some of our greatest financiers spend the winters (and some of their money). Then the ride through Eastlake Park, where one feels that the lifelong dream of fairyland is realized.

Then you must take a run to the beach; so we will board a car and speed away to the great Pacific. You may don your bathing suit and go into the surf to dive, plunge, swim and battle with the breakers, if you wish, but I prefer (at this season of the year) to sit upon warm sand and allow nothing to disturb the silence save the dash and roar of the restless surf; and look away to where nothing breaks the line between the deep blue and the lighter blue of the sky. Yes, give me the dear old REGISTER, and nothing shall trespass upon my reflections of the news from home and the pleasures of the passing day.

I assure you, Mr. Ake, after a day spent as I have outlined you will be ready to enjoy a clam chowder and some more of the substantial viands and delicacies which I promise you if you will join our party.

Very sincerely yours,
NETTIE M. BELLIS.

Why Obnoxious Laws Cannot Be Enforced.

Mr. Folk is illustrating that an obnoxious law can't be enforced, even though most un-American and autocratic methods are employed. His man, the pin-headed Mulvihill, will revoke a saloon-keeper's license if the dramshop keeper is spoken to on the street by a man who is "charged with being suspected" of having made a wager on a horse race at any time during his life. But does that stop gambling? Nay, nay, my son. The handbook makers operate in cigar stores, barber shops, on the curb and elsewhere, and gambling goes blithely on. And did Folk arbitrarily appoint a despot of barber shops, of cigar stores, etc., the gambling would still go on. Did he autocratically abolish racing through the world, men would instantly find something else on which to gamble. The reason is not far to seek. Deceit that a man shall not risk his own money on any chance he chooses, is an outrageous interference with man's fundamental rights, and all men so view it, either unconsciously or subconsciously. And they will submit to no law that denies to them this elemental liberty. Laws to regulate gambling so that it does not become a public nuisance or menace, are all right, because in that instance the rights of society are involved; but when any Pharisee undertakes to assume guardianship over a man's private actions on the score that it is to his moral benefit, that man will find a way to nullify that idiotic and insulting effort.—St. Louis Censor.
